

Dad,

I wanted to get you something incredibly meaning full for Christmas but my mind couldn't make a decision. I felt no gift could express how I much I love you and how badly we need each other at times like this. For once in my life I had a hard time putting my feelings into words, but I felt this would make a good gift for you.

Our family has gone through a lot lately but I feel you need some reassuring. I know it makes it 100 times harder to actually be there and see everything happen, and to experience this as well as daily life stress. Although this is a new journey for our family, especially for me, I know we will be able to get through this one way or another. You are a strong, positive, amazing person, and I know this won't get you down.

I wanted to thank you for the many things you have done for me in my life. Driving me anywhere I needed to go, encouraging me non stop, making sure my future is going to be fantastic no matter what I choose to do and always be there for me. I love how you have been there for me emotionally throughout this whole process. I love how you have never stopped worrying about me, even though we both know I'm going to be okay. I love you to the moon and back.

Love Jordan.

Dec 25, 2009